How about the Institute materials? How was the format?

I liked the way you did it.

I would have preferred only an index listing the website locations for each document, and not the document itself.

I would have preferred two smaller binders; one with the materials used in the presentations and the other with resource and background materials.

I would have preferred one small binder with a table of contents and tabs for where materials should go, with the materials themselves being available at the individual sessions.

None of the above; here is what would have been the most effective way to make the Institute materials available to attendees:

In the resource materials I found the "Key Concepts" to be:

enough information

not enough information. I would like more information on _____

too much information

In the resource materials I found the "Examples and Common Solutions" to be:

enough information

not enough information. I would like more information on _____

too much information

In the resource materials I found the "Selected Resources" to be:

enough information

not enough information. I would like more information on _____

too much information

How would you rate this Institute overall?

Excellent

Good

Fair

Poor
